Newspaper Praises President as Cleverer Than Astute Roosevelt

London, Sept. 1.—The London Standard today publishes an editorial under the heading, "Wilson, Roosevelt," which is a friendly tone and for admiration expressed.

Wilson is pictured in the editorial as being more astute than Roosevelt. The editorial says that Wilson is a more astute politician than Roosevelt, and that he is more astute than Roosevelt in his handling of the submarine issue.

OROZCO KILLED IN CANYON CAMP BY AMERICAN POSSE

Mexican Bandit Leader Trained Into Wilds, Where He Thought He Was Safe, and Shot.

CHASE IN THE MOUNTAINS

Big Bend Country of Texas Arming Against Possible Attempt to Avenge Death.

By Associated Press.

SIERRA BLANCA, Tex., Sept. 1.—Men of the Big Bend country to the vicinity of the boundary line of El Paso and Culberson counties were under arms today for fear of reprisals by Gen. Pascual Orozco's organization of "Colorado."

As a result of the killing of the Mexican leader Monday by United States soldiers and Texas ranchmen.

Appeal was made for more military protection. It was feared that the followers of Eduardo Salinas, now at Bosque Bonito, were connected with Orozco's plans and might attempt to avenge his death.

From reports, American authorities formed the theory that Orozco was trying to bring about an organized invasion of Texas upon a large scale, and his followers operating under the name of the Nationalist party. Into this party were to be drawn malcontents of all factions.

This party eventually was to align with Carranza and not Huerta. In the event of Carranza's refusal to accept the A. B. C. plan for a peace conference of Mexican leaders, it was reported.

For the time being, Orozco, driven to desperation by poverty, had organized a band of Mexicans on the American side of the border, mostly from El Paso, to raid American ranches along the border, according to United States secret service men and customs guards.

Orozco and his band began looting ranches near Yuleta, 12 miles from El Paso, 10 days ago, it is alleged, and were driven into the Big Bend country, where they were looting ranches when they were shot.

Orozco was one of the first to join Francisco Madero when the latter organized his revolt against Gen. Porfirio Diaz. In 1910, Orozco took the field in Northern Chihuahua and, with his company of bull guards as a nucleus, soon raised the most effective fighting force under Madero's banner.

Facing tremendously superior forces, he remained in the field throughout the Madero revolution, even throughout the time when Madero himself was forced into hiding in the United States, escaping the pursuing Federalists by his knowledge of the mountains and the mobility of his mounted men.

Orozco was the senior general among those with Madero at the taking of Juarez and the command of the captured town.

When Madero became President, Orozco accompanied him to Mexico City, but it was not long before a disagreement arose over large sums of money Orozco alleged to be due him and his father, Col. Orozco, Orozco abandoned his allegiance to Madero and again took to the hills, taking the majority of the men who had followed him through the Madero campaigns with him.

This command became known as the "Colorado" or red flaggers from the banner under which they fought and earned the bitter hatred of the followers of Madero through their harsh treatment of the people and country through which they made their raids.

Joined Adherents of Huerta.

With the fall of Madero, Orozco joined the adherents of Huerta and became one of the most active of the military chiefs of the latter. He took part in scores of engagements and skirmishes in Chihuahua, Durango, Coahuila and Nuevo Leon.

Following the rapid successes of the adherents of Huerta, Orozco, Villagomez, Oregon and others, determined efforts were made to capture Orozco and his band, but he managed to slip through the net. He became a will-o'-the-wisp, appearing and disappearing in the most unexpected places, and covering distances that spoke wonders for the marching ability of his men.

He was one of the nine Federal Generals at the battle of Ojinaga. The march of the Federal officers and over 4000 men were forced to flee into the United States after that disastrous defeat and were interned, but Orozco made his escape and soon organized another command.

Long Avoided Followers.

Thoroughly familiar with the border, he slipped in and out of Mexico apparently at will, although immediate execution was the kindest fate he might expect if captured by the Constitution.

He was equally successful in avoiding United States troops and Federal officers. He is known to have lived for months within a short distance of El Paso, but, although a dozen expeditions were organized to capture him, he always received warning in time to make his escape to the hills.

Throughout much of this period Orozco's family lived quietly in Southern California.

His band finally was broken last August with the advance on Mexico City of the Constitutionalists under Obregon, Jesus Carranza, Pablo Gonzalez and Gutierrez, while Villa's troops held the road to his old haunts to the north.

He again slipped through the lines, however, and made his way into the United States.

With the arrival in the United States of Gen. Huerta, Orozco joined his former chief and accompanied him on the journey to El Paso, which culminated in the arrest of both at Newman, N. M., last June, by United States officials.

After a few nights later, and it is supposed, has been in the vicinity where he was killed since that time.

Mexican Raider Cornered and Killed by American Posse

tumbled him dead to the rock basin below.

Gen. Pascual Orozco was the son of a small storekeeper in Chihuahua. When he reached manhood he became a "bullion conductor" and, with his party of guards, escorted the pack trains and the bullion from the mines in Chihuahua through the bandit-infested hills to the railroad. It was in this work that he first achieved a reputation for bravery and skill.

Orozco was one of the first to join Francisco Madero when the latter organized his revolt against Gen. Porfirio Diaz. In 1910, Orozco took the field in Northern Chihuahua and, with his company of bull guards as a nucleus, soon raised the most effective fighting force under Madero's banner.

Tax Judgments for $48,000 Are Not Collected

comes a time when payment of the delinquent personal tax is made. This occurs, Koehn said, when the delinquent tries to sell his real estate. Title examiners find the personal tax judgments on the court record and insist upon the payment of the back personal tax, so that there will be no possibility of "clouding" the title to the real estate sold by the delinquent personal taxpayer.

Joseph Dickmann, Chief Deputy Sheriff, said Collector Koehn was mistaken in his belief that the Sheriff received a fee of about $40 for making an execution on a personal tax judgment. He said the Sheriff received a commission of 14 per cent where judgment was collected without a sale, and a fee of 3 per cent of the amount the property brought when sold at auction to settle a judgment. There is a cost of about $5.00 for advertising such a sale, he said.

Prominent Persons Sued.

Among the prominent residents, including present or former public officials and politicians, sued for back personal taxes, were these:

William A. Isee, Congressman from the Eleventh District, $4,875.

Thomas G. Hennings, Circuit Judge, $28.65.

Joseph D. Howe, former Republican boss, sued jointly with Lewis T. Howe for $13.32, on a tax bill dated from 1910. Paid after suit was filed.

F. W. Baumhoff, former postmaster, $13.32.

Grant Gillespie, former Assistant Circuit Attorney, $24.47.

Henry Kortjohn Jr., former Election Commissioner, $112.58.

Matt G. Reynolds, former Circuit Judge, $12.13, for 1910, 1911 and two bills for 1912. Paid up after suit was filed.

Arthur N. Sager, former Circuit Attorney, $41.29.

C. Porter Johnson, lawyer, $15.31.

Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, former Democratic City Chairman, $63.75.

Vital W. Garesche, former City Attorney, $22.20.

The Rev. Father Timothy Dempsey, $37.33, on an estate for which he was administrator.

RUSSIA'S WAR EXPENSE IN 1915 $3,621,000,000

Duma Committee Favors Extension of Use of Paper Money and Another Foreign Loan.

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 1.—The Finance Committee of the Duma has presented a bill extending the rights of the State Bank to issue paper money. The committee report discussed the entire problem of meeting war expenses, stating that the sums needed were so large that all possible sources of revenue must be used—taxation, internal credit operations, an issue of paper money and foreign loans.

"For 1915," the report stated, "the estimated war expenses are 7,342,000,000 rubles ($3,621,000,000) and other expenses 2,877,000,000 rubles ($1,438,500,000), making a total of over 10,000,000,000 rubles ($5,000,000,000)."

The revenue from ordinary receipts is estimated at 2,796,000,000 rubles ($1,398,000,000), while credit operations up to the present time have yielded 4,181,000,000 rubles ($2,090,500,000), leaving over 3,000,000,000 rubles ($1,500,000,000) yet to be provided.

"The Government must prepare the ground for another important loan in foreign markets to pay for material purchased abroad, but, in view of our agreement with our allies, there is no doubt of our success. In the whole financial history of Russia there never has been a moment's delay in paying creditors."

Regarding the proposed development of the issue of paper money, the report said: "Compared with other nations, Russia holds the greatest cover in gold for her paper money, with the possible exception of Great Britain."

Minister of Finance Bark, supporting the report of the committee, said that Russia possessed immense reserves of savings of which the Government intended soon to make use. The Government is increasing the number of savings banks, simplifying and facilitating their use by the people.

ERS
GAL,
STATETRIP TO COUNTRY
CAUSED HER ARREST

MRS. EVELYN STORMS POSTON.

PHYSICIAN, SHOT IN AUTO WITH WOMAN
ASSISTANT, DIESCouple Attacked From Another Machine on Dark Road Near Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 1.—Dr. C. Franklin Mohr died today in the Rhode Island Hospital from injuries received last night when he was shot while riding in an automobile with Miss Emily Burger, a domestic employed in his home. The woman also was wounded.

The police have been unable to find any trace of the occupants of another automobile from which the shots were fired.

The doctor, who maintains offices here and in Newport, was making his regular Tuesday night trip by automobile to Newport. At a dark spot in the road, near West Barrington, his chauffeur stopped the car, complaining that the carburetor was not working properly.

The chauffeur, George W. Heald, had opened the hood of the car and walked around to the right side of the car when another automobile, which had been following the doctor's car, approached.

From this car five revolver shots were fired. Four of them took effect. Dr. Mohr was shot in the back of the head and through the back of the right shoulder. Miss Burger, who jumped up at the first shot, was hit also in the head and in the shoulder.

The doctor fell back into the car. Miss Burger fell outward, toppling over the side.

Another automobile came along. The occupants of this car advised the chauffeur to rush the wounded back to Providence, to the Rhode Island Hospital.

The police believe the attack was deliberately planned. Heald had been employed by the physician since May. The police are looking up his record.

He insists that all he knew was that several shots were fired from the back of the car. He said he saw the flashes. He is positive that he did not see or hear any automobile either before or after the attack.

Mrs. Mohr, who has not been with her husband since the trial of an assault suit brought against the doctor by a domestic in their home, hurried to the Rhode Island Hospital.

She broke down when informed of her husband's condition. Miss Burger, she said, was the cause of all her domestic trouble. So hysterical did she become that the doctors at the hospital were obliged to send her home.

Miss Burger today said she and Dr. Mohr were on the way to Newport and that their automobile stopped in Barrington because of engine trouble. While the chauffeur was repairing the engine she and Dr. Mohr remained in the car. She said she saw another car approaching from the rear and as it came alongside several shots were fired at Dr. Mohr and herself. Miss Burger could give no explanation for the assault.

MAKES DANDRUFF
QUICKLY VANISH

No one likes dandruff, but to get rid of it you must do more than wash your hair. The cause of dandruff lies not in the hair, but on the scalp and in the hair roots, and just as easily daily you use a germicidal tooth powder or cream to cleanse your teeth of germs, so you should use Parisian Sage twice daily to drive dandruff from your scalp, prevent its return, protect your hair from falling out and nourish its proper growth. Dandruff makes your hair fall out. Parisian Sage makes dandruff fall out and your hair stay in.

A delightfully perfumed hair and scalp treatment, easily applied, has home very inexpensive and obtainable from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or at any drug or toilet counter.

SHERIFF ARRESTED WOMAN GUEST OF HOSPITABLE WIFEDelay of Mrs. Evelyn Poston in Returning Horse Caused Liverlyman Here to Worry.

Mrs. Evelyn Storms Poston, 30 years old, of 2506 Glasgow avenue, was released by the police at noon today, after having spent last night and this morning in the matron's room at headquarters. She was brought to St. Louis as a prisoner last night by Sheriff Emory Moss of Jefferson County, because a St. Louis liverman from whom she rented a horse was worried by her failure to bring the horse back on schedule time.

The liverman, John Anthony of 1802 North Grand avenue, said after talking with the young woman at the Dayton Street Station, that he would not prosecute her. With her, the police released Henry Vohauer, 22 years old, of 2500 North Garrison avenue, and Joseph Dillon, 19, of 367 Greer avenue, who were her escorts on the ride to Jefferson County, and who were arrested with her.

The young woman's husband has been several months at the State tuberculosis camp at Mount Vernon, Mo., and she lives with her parents. The parents, she said today, own a farm near Barnhart, Jefferson County, 35 miles south of St. Louis. A big peach crop grew there this season, and she decided to go there with a horse and wagon and bring back a load of the fruit. Through an arrangement approved by her family, she said, the two young men accompanied her on the trip, starting last Saturday.

She told Anthony she would return Monday with his horse. But high water delayed the journey both ways, and Mrs. Poston said she was further detained by the Sheriff's wife, an old friend, who insisted that the travelers stay Monday night at her home near Barnhart.

Monday night the liverman asked the St. Louis police to look for his horse. Sheriff Moss, at Barnhart, Tuesday read in a St. Louis paper of this request, and with a stern declaration of "due diligence" he proceeded to arrest his wife's three guests.

She is Angry Generally. The young woman, on reaching St. Louis, was angry with the liverman for worrying about his horse, angry with the Sheriff for detaining her, with the Sheriff's wife for arresting her, and with the St. Louis police for their determination to hold her until the liverman should withdraw his complaint.

She said she would convince the horse's owner that everything was all right, and that she would pay for the time she had driven the animal. She did not think she should be blamed for the fact that the horse, the wagon, borrowed from a neighbor, and the peaches were still at Barnhart. She said she was properly chaperoned at the Sheriff's house and at the farm, where a tenant family by the name of Young lives.

One of the board members did not appear. He was paying much attention to the Mayor was saying. His glance seemed fixed on the Mayor's bosom, about one-third of the way from the Adam's apple to the belt buckle.

"By the way, how much do you value that diamond?" he asked somewhat irrelevantly.

"Oh, about $100."

"Looks to me more like $200!"

"Anything to be agreeable," said the Mayor, so they split the difference and assessed it at $150.

MAN ARRESTED FOR ANNOYING
WOMEN IN PARKHerbert E. Newbill Taken Near Place Where "Man of Mystery" Was Detained.

Herbert E. Newbill, a married man, 33 years old, employed as a car builder by the United Railways and living at 4733 Rosa avenue, was arrested in Tower Grove Park at 8:30 last night by a policeman and park watchman who say they saw him trying to annoy women. When Newbill's case was called in Judge Hogan's police court today a continuance to Sept. 9 was granted at the request of his attorney, who said additional time was needed to summon witnesses.

The policeman say they first saw him at Shakespeare Circle trying to attract the attention of two women who were passing on the main drive. They followed him through the shrubbery to another part of the park and saw him repeat the offense and arrested him after he had tried to attract the notice of a party of motorists.

When the prisoner was taken to the Magnolia Avenue Police Station his only defense, according to the police, was that he did not know what he had been doing, as he was ill, having just recovered from an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Newbill and Mrs. Julia Walter, 4733 Rosa avenue, appeared at the station an hour after the arrest and Mrs. Walter signed the prisoner's bond. He was released.

The arrest was at almost the identical place where, less than two weeks ago, Clyde Wise Portlock was arrested on the complaint of two little girls. Portlock posed as "John Wilkinson" until after he had been fined $500 in police court, and his remarkable efforts to prevent his identity from becoming known drew wide attention to his case. He denied the charge and appealed.

The police say there is no personal resemblance between Portlock and Newbill.

Mayor Edmund Beall of Alton appeared before the Madison County Board of Review yesterday, wearing his latest everyday suit of clothes. A large diamond and gleamed in his shirt front.

PATROLMAN WHO WAS WOUNDED BY A NEGRO DIESLeo Kraeger Was Shot When Trying to Arrest George Rodgers.

Probationary Patrolman Leo Kraeger of the South District died at the city hospital at 8 o'clock last night, five hours after being wounded by George Rodgers, a negro, 33 years old, whom he was attempting to arrest. Rodgers is held at the South District Police Station.

Kraeger went to the shipping department of the Cox & Gordon Packing Co., 1019 South Third street, at 3 p. m. to arrest Rodgers on an order issued yesterday morning after the negro had fired several shots at Lena Johnson, a negro, in her home at 100 High street.

The negro was entering the shipping department when Kraeger stepped to the freight platform and shouted to him to surrender. Rodgers drew a revolver and fired three shots. The policeman half turned to dodge the bullets and one of them entered his head behind the right ear. He fell unconscious. Rodgers then fled.

Kraeger survived his wound at several shipping clerks and at the building. The board found that every possible precaution had been taken within the limitations of design, and the report pays tribute to the efficiency of the men who lost their lives.

With the F-4 now in dry dock at Honolulu, a new board, headed by Rear Admiral Boush, has been appointed by the Navy Department to ascertain if possible the cause of the disaster.

Although the first board reported that it could come to no conclusion as to the cause, the possibility that the crew might have been killed by chlorine gas is indicated in the finding.

Board's Principal Findings.

In connection with the following principal findings of the board it is pointed out that each defect reported as to the F-4 obtains in all boats of the class:

The structure of the hull of the torpedo boat F-4 was regularly inspected and the condition as to repair and upkeep was excellent, only the most minor corrosion having been taken place.

The structure of the hull had not suffered loss of strength by corrosion of hull plating.

The propelling engines (Diesel oil type, four-cycle type) have inherent faults and are difficult to keep in repair, but were kept in as high a state of efficiency as was practicable within the limitations of said design.

This unsatisfactory condition of the propelling engines had no bearing on the loss of the submarine, as this boat at the time of her loss was being propelled by the electric motors and storage batteries.

The electric motors were in good condition, having been repaired by the ship's force, assisted by the navy yard force at the United States naval station, Pearl Harbor, territory of Hawaii.

The storage batteries were in good condition within the limitations of design.

Danger From Storage Batteries.

The storage batteries were always in a state of being more or less electrically "grounded," due to the leakage of electrolyte or by capillary action of the electrolyte or moisture and poor insulation, or bad electrical contact, and these said "grounds" have been noted to be of sufficient intensity at times to cause flame and the fusing of electrical connections.

This condition is well known to the officers and men of this submarine torpedo boat division, and due care is exercised in attempting to reduce this danger to a minimum.

The storage batteries, during the charging, evolved excessive quantities of hydrogen gas, and further, during the early stages of discharging, quantities of hydrogen gas were evolved and the fumes of hydrogen and of acid became noticeable in the interior of the boat on long dives.

On the F-4, March 6, 1915, while one electrical ventilator blower was stopped for a short period for minor repairs, probably from a "ground" in the ventilating blower's electrical circuit, a hydrogen explosion took place which damaged the battery deck and broke several separators of the cells of the storage batteries.

The conditions under which an explosion of hydrogen is always possible obtain in all of the boats of the F class. The covering over the storage batteries or the battery deck in accordance with specification, with the torpedo boat No. 23, is to be practically gas tight, and water tight, which condition does not obtain in this so-called battery deck and does permit water to seep into the batteries.

The sea water has at times seeped into the cells of the storage batteries of the boats of the F class, causing the evolution of chlorine gas, which gas is quickly destructive of life.

A comparatively small amount of sea water can cause the liberation of sufficient chlorine gas to asphyxiate the crew of a submarine while in a submerged condition.

This condition obtains in all boats of the F class and in the submarine torpedo boat F-1 a small quantity of sea water seeped into three cells of the forward storage battery, damaging the cells and liberating quantities of chlorine gas. No fatalities or injuries to personnel followed, as the boat was moved to the dock and the hatches were open at the time.

Trouble With Steering Gear.

The steering gear of the submarine torpedo boat F-4 had in the past given trouble, but had been repaired. The design of the said steering gear is good and satisfactory.

All inspection of safety appliances, so far as can be ascertained, have been carried out, as required by the navy regulations and orders from the division commander of this division.

All inspections were regularly carried

He raised the opposite gate to enable the auto to get off the railroad tracks, but failed to get the license number of the machine and could not tell whether or not any of the occupants of the car were injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—United States Senator Phil Penrose today referred to Elihu Root's remarks concerning "invisible government" as a catch-penny phrase. He declared himself to be opposed to the short ballot, which was advocated by Root.

The so-called short ballot is only another name for concentrating enormous power in the hands of one individual," said he. "Experience demonstrates that human nature is frail enough to render it probable that in nearly every case this power will be abused."

ONLY ONE OF THE BODIES OF F-4'S CREW OF 22 IDENTIFIED
Little More Than the Skeletons, Mixed With the Debris of the Sea, Found in the Hull of the Wrecked Submarine.By Associated Press.
HONOLULU, T. H., Sept. 1.—Naval officers in charge of the wrecked United States submarine F-4 indicated today that there was scant hope of establishing the identity of the 21 bodies still held in the vessel.

The bodies, of which little is left but bare skeletons, were found last night mixed with the debris of the sea. Of the crew of 22 men who went to their death when the F-4 dived in maneuvers, March 3, only one body has been positively identified, that of George T. Ashcroft of Los Angeles, summer's mate. It was identified by a dental bridge, naval officers said.

It was estimated today that at least three days would be required to clear the interior of bodies and debris.

Weakness of F Type of Submarines
Pointed Out by Board of Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Serious weaknesses common to all four of the navy's "F" type of submarines are pointed out in the report, just made public, of the board of inquiry which made an investigation at Honolulu immediately after the loss of the F-4 with her crew of 22, last March. So far as could be determined before the boat was raised, the board found that every possible precaution had been taken within the limitations of design, and the report pays tribute to the efficiency of the men who lost their lives.

With the F-4 now in dry dock at Honolulu, a new board, headed by Rear Admiral Boush, has been appointed by the Navy Department to ascertain if possible the cause of the disaster.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discoveries

Perhaps this case may be similar to yours. J. Wesley Tilly of (Box 673), Selma, Cal., writes: "Gentlemen:—It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial, if by its reaching some sufferer your medicines will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled with a great deal of malaria and biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of liver boils. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's medicines, to try the Golden Medical Discoveries. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the Golden Medical Discoveries for my relief."

Followed as a precaution for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have been trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discoveries and they have rid me of the troublesome gas and have aided me in conquering the whole trouble. I thank you for the Golden Medical Discoveries I have obtained from The People's Common Sense Medical Advice. Send only 21 cents for this 100 page book.

BIG BOND ISSUE FOR COUNTY ROAD.
TO BE PROPOSEDGrand Jury to Recommend $3-000,000 Expenditure on Highways, Prison Farm and Jail.

Four members of the Clayton grand jury, which has conducted investigations of highway conditions in St. Louis County, today told a Post-Dispatch reporter that within two weeks the grand jury would recommend to the County Court that a special election be called to vote on a bond issue of $3,000,000 to build roads, buy a prison farm and erect a new and modern jail on it.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Brooks has prepared petitions to the County Court urging it to call the election. When the petitions are signed by 100 taxpayers of the county they become mandatory on the court for the election call.

The need for building many new bridges in the county to replace those washed out by the flood 10 days ago has made the issue a vital one.

the Loop in Aeroplane.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Reports of the death of Adolphe Peggold, the famous aviator, have been officially confirmed. The news carried sorrow among the French people who regarded him as a hero. Peggold, who was only 35 years old, served five years in the French army during the war in the Moroccan campaign. At the outbreak of the present war he joined the aviation corps as a private but soon gained a sub-Lieutenant's commission because of his skill and daring. He exploits won him the military medal and the military cross. Peggold brought down his sixth German aircraft July 11. Adolphe Peggold gained renown in 1913 when he originated the feat of flying upside down in an aeroplane and looping the loop.

BANKRUPT SHOE MERCHANT TRIES TO KILL HIMSELF

Abe Ginsberg Whose Creditors
Lost $10,000 Is Found Overcome by Gas.

Abe Ginsberg, formerly a shoe merchant at 1802 South Broadway, whose creditors lost $10,000 when he became bankrupt in 1912, tried to kill himself yesterday afternoon in a bedroom at his home, 1388 South Broadway. His wife, upon finding the bedroom door locked, summoned a policeman, who broke a transom and crawled into the room. Ginsberg had been overcome by gas which he had turned on. He was taken to the city hospital and revived with a pulmonary. Physicians said today he probably would recover from the effects of the gas, but that his general physical condition was poor.

Ginsberg has been despondent over three years' illness. He recently appeared as a witness before Referee in Bankruptcy Coles, who is trying to determine what has become of the $10,000 worth of shoes which were delivered at the front door of Ginsberg's store after Ginsberg had turned the business over to a friend and went to a hospital. Ginsberg tried to shoot himself in 1913, when indicted on a charge of making a false financial statement. Later he was acquitted of the charge.

DEFINITE MOVE BY BALKANS NOT YET IN SIGHT

Entente Diplomats Find It Dif-cult to Adjust Conflicting Demands of Nations.

By Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Balkan situation is discussed at length in dispatches to the morning papers from Bucharest, Sofia and Athens. Although the correspondents generally are optimistic, emphasis is placed on the difficulties which the diplomats of the Quadruple Entente Powers are encountering in their endeavors to adjust the conflicting demands and disarm the mutual suspicion of the Balkan nations.

As to the counter activity of the Triple Alliance, the Post Sofia correspondent reports that the Turks are preparing for the evacuation of territory ceded to Bulgaria by demolishing forts on the right bank of the Maritza and by pulling down barracks at Karagatch. "The actual Bulgarian occupation of ceded territory through which the Dedagatch railway runs," the correspondent says, "will follow soon, it is stated."

Developments Are Slow.
The Standard's Athens representative believes no definite developments in the Balkan situation can be expected in the immediate future.

"The negotiations which must be concluded before any one of the Balkan countries can intervene in the war are protracted and troublesome," he says, "owing to great difficulty of harmonizing the conflicting interests. Serbia is willing to go a long way toward meeting Bulgarian requirements, but even here there seems still some obstacle to a complete agreement concerning the participation of the Bulgarian army. As for Greece, if there is to be intervention, it will not come until Greek interests demand it and its sole object will be to lay the foundations of a greater Greece which must include large portions of near Eastern territory. If the decision comes, however, Premier Venizelos will have the undivided support of the King, country and army leaders, for he already has exacted the most binding assurances to this effect."

Better Understanding Needed.
The Bucharest correspondent of the Times emphasizes the necessity for a better understanding between Rumania and Bulgaria. "The most important thing," he declares, "is to establish relations of confidence between these two countries. There is evident an identity of interests and Rumania avows her willingness to make required concessions but no concrete arrangements have been concluded. If Rumania could be induced to make a definite offer to Bulgaria, the effect on her sister country would be immediate."

The Bulgarian Minister had a long conference yesterday with Sir Edward Grey, the British Minister of Foreign Affairs, after which the Ambassadors of the Entente Powers and the Serbian Minister called on the Foreign Minister.

Servia Said to Have Informed Greece She Will Meet Entente Demands.
PARIS, Sept. 1.—The Servian Government has informed Greece that it intends to comply with the request of the Quadruple Entente concerning the concessions demanded by Bulgaria, says an Athens dispatch to the Matin.

SUIT ASKING FOR RECEIVER FOR BUCKINGHAM HOTEL WITHDRAWN

The suit of Fred Cline against the Buckingham Hotel Co., asking that a receiver be appointed for the property, was withdrawn this morning in Judge Kimmel's court by John S. Leahy, counsel for the plaintiff. The lawyer told the Court that Cline had sold his holdings, 90 shares of common stock, to others associated with the company and had no further reason to prosecute the case. Costs were placed against the defendant company. These include $122.50 for an audit, $82 for depositions taken and about $80 court costs.

MOUNTAIN OF MANGANESE ORE DISCOVERED NEAR SPRINGFIELD

Mining Engineers Believe That Other Deposits, Richer Than Those in Arkansas, Will Be Found.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 1.—The first manganese to be found in the State of Missouri was discovered yesterday by E. C. Warfel of Topeka, Kan., mining engineer and mineralogist, on the Springfield ranch, a tract of 8000 acres owned by A. J. Johnston of this city. A mountain of the valuable ore was found. Warfel has been conducting investigations on the ranch for several days. He believes that other deposits even richer than those in Arkansas will be found on the ranch, which is in Christian County, a short distance from this city.

Manganese is used in hardening steel. It is an oxidizing agent for chlorine gas and has been in great demand since the beginning of the war. Manganese sells now for more than lead or jack.

"I believe that the find of manganese will be followed by the discovery of both gold and silver in the Ozarks," Warfel said.

GREY SAYS GERMANY IN 1912 TRIED TO BIND BRITAIN AND LEAVE HERSELF FREE

Foreign Secretary Tells Why Proposals Could Not Be Accepted — Declares Offer of Neutrality Was Valueless.

By Associated Press.
LONDON, Sept. 1.—The British Foreign Office has issued a lengthy statement concerning the negotiations between Great Britain and Germany in 1912, compiled from the official records in the Foreign Office. The statement follows:

"An account of the 1912 Anglo-German negotiations was published in the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung last month. This account was misleading and no doubt was intended to mislead. It made it appear that the British Government had at that time rejected what would be regarded in many quarters as a reasonable offer of friendship from Germany. In these circumstances it is as well to publish a statement of facts compiled from the official records here.

"Early in 1912 the German Chancellor, Lord High Chancellor, the following formula as one which would meet the views of the Imperial Government:

Proposed Formula.
"1. The high contracting parties assure each other mutually of their desire for peace and friendship.

"2. They will not, either of them, make or prepare to make any unprovoked attack upon the other or join in any combination or design against the other for the purpose of aggression or become a party to any plan of naval or military enterprise, alone or in combination with any other power, directed to such an end, and declare themselves not to be bound by any such engagement.

"3. If either of the high contracting parties becomes entangled in war with one or more Powers, in which it cannot be said to be the aggressor, the other party will at least observe toward the Power so entangled benevolent neutrality, and will use its utmost endeavor for the localization of the conflict. If either of the high contracting parties is forced to go to war by obvious provocation by a third party, they bind themselves to enter into an exchange of views concerning their attitude on such a conflict.

Existing Agreements.
"4. The duty of neutrality which arises out of the preceding article has no application in so far as it may not be reconcilable with existing agreements, which the high contracting parties already have made.

"5. The making of new agreements, which render it impossible for either of the parties to observe neutrality toward the other beyond what is provided by the preceding limitation is excluded in conformity with the provisions of article 2.

"6. The high contracting parties declare they will do all in their power to prevent differences and misunderstandings arising between them and other Powers. These conditions, although in appearance fair as between the parties, would have been grossly unfair and one-sided in their operation. Owing to the general position of the European Powers and treaty engagements by which they were bound, the result of articles 4 and 5 would have been that while Germany, in case of a European conflict, would have remained free to support her friends, this country would have been forbidden to raise a finger in defense of hers.

"Germany could arrange without difficulty that the formal inception of hostilities should rest with Austria. If Austria and Russia were at war, Germany would support Austria, as is evident by what occurred at the end of July, 1914, while as soon as Russia was attacked by two Powers, France was bound to continue her assistance. In other words the pledge of neutrality offered by Germany would have been absolutely valueless because she could always plead the necessity of fulfilling her existing obligations under the Triple Alliance as an excuse for departing from neutrality.

Not Bound by Alliances.
"On the other hand, no such departure, however serious the provocation, would have been possible for this country, which was bound by an alliance, with the exception of those of Japan and Portugal, while the making of fresh alliances was prohibited by article five. In a word, as appeared still more evident later, there was to be a guarantee of absolute neutrality on one side, but not on the other. It was impossible for us to enter into a contract so obviously inequitable and the formula accordingly was rejected by Sir Edward Grey.

"Count Paul Wolff-Metternich (the German Ambassador to Great Britain) upon this, pressed for counter proposals, which he stated would be without prejudice and not binding unless we were satisfied our wishes were met on the naval question. On the understanding Sir Edward Grey, on March 14, 1912, gave Count Wolff-Metternich the following draft formula which had been approved by the Cabinet:

"England will make no unprovoked attack upon Germany and pursue no aggressive policy toward her. Aggression upon Germany is not the subject and forms no part of any treaty, understanding or combination to which England is now a party, nor will she become a party to anything that has such an object.

Considered Inadequate.
"Count Wolff Metternich thought this formula inadequate and suggested two alternative additional clauses:

"England will, therefore, observe at least benevolent neutrality should war be forced upon Germany, or, England will therefore, as a matter of course, remain neutral if war is forced upon Germany.

"This," he added, "would not be binding unless our wishes were met with regard to the naval program. Sir Edward Grey considered that the British proposals were sufficient. He explained that if Germany desired to crush France, England might not be able to sit still, though if France were aggressive or attacked Germany no support would be given by his Majesty's Government or approved by England.

"It is obvious that the real object of the German proposal was to obtain the neutrality of England in all eventualities, since should war break out, Germany would certainly contend that it had been forced upon her and would claim that England should remain neutral.

"An admirable example of this is the present war, in which, in spite of the facts, Germany contends the war has been forced upon her. Even the third member of the Triple Alliance, who had sources of information not open to us, did not share this view, but regarded it as an aggressive war.

Sir Edward Grey's Formula.
"Sir Edward Grey eventually proposed the following formula:

"The two Powers being mutually desirous of securing peace and friendship between them, England declares that she will neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack upon Germany. Aggression upon Germany forms no part of any treaty, understanding or combination to which England now is a party, nor will she become a party to anything that has such an object.

"Sir Edward Grey, when he handed this formula to Count Wolff-Metternich, said that use of the word neutrality would convey the impression that more was meant than was warranted by the text. He suggested that the substance of what was required would be obtained from the more accurately expressed words, "will neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack."

"Count Wolff-Metternich thereupon received instructions to make it quite clear that the Chancellor could recommend to the Emperor to give up the essential parts of the formula (the bill then pending for an increase of the German navy) only if he could conclude an agreement guaranteeing neutrality of a far-reaching character and leaving no doubt as to any interpretation. He admitted that the Chancellor's wish amounted to a guarantee of absolute neutrality, failing which the formula must proceed.

No Chance of Withdrawal.
"Count Wolff-Metternich stated that there was no chance of a withdrawal of the formula, but said that it might be modified. It would be disappointing to the Chancellor if we did not go beyond the formula we had suggested. Sir Edward Grey said that he could understand that there would be disappointment if His Majesty's Government were to state that the carrying out of the formula would put an end to the negotiations and form an insurmountable obstacle to better relations. His Majesty's Government did not say this and they hoped that the formula which they had suggested might be considered in connection with the discussion of territorial arrangements even if it did not prove effective in preventing an increase in the naval expenditures.

"Sir Edward Grey added that if some arrangement could be made between the two Governments it would have a favorable, though indirect effect upon naval expenditures; as time went on, it would have moreover, a favorable direct effect on the public opinion of both countries.

"A few days after Count Wolff-Metternich communicated to Sir Edward Grey the substance of a letter from the Chancellor in which the latter said as the formula suggested by His Majesty's Government was, from the German point of view, insufficient and as His Majesty's Government could not agree to the larger formula for which they had asked, the formula must proceed on the lines on which it had been presented to the Federal Council.

"The negotiations then came to an end and with them the hope of a mutual reduction in the expenditure for armaments by the two countries."

FASTING FOR JEWS

Apert for Prayers Because of War.

RE, Sept. 1.—All the Orthodox synagogues throughout the city were notified today that they had been set apart as a place of fasting and prayer. The practice of the old Jewish custom of fasting for a day and night of national tribulation.

The proclamation was made last night at the Great Synagogue of the Orthodox Jews here, after imposing ceremonies attended by 100 rabbis from all over the country. Speakers told an immense congregation of the sufferings of the brethren in Asia and Europe. It was ordered that on each of the Jewish holidays now approaching a silver collection should be taken in every synagogue for the Jewish war sufferers. It is hoped that $1,000,000 will be raised in this way.

SUES LAWYER FOR ACCOUNTING OF $3400 ESTATE

Miss Elizabeth Rowan Asks That $1000 Loan to Louis Hudson Be Set Aside.

Miss Elizabeth Rowan, chief clerk at the city hospital, today filed suit in the Circuit Court against her former attorney, Louis Hudson, who has offices in the Chemical Building, demanding an accounting of funds of an estate he collected for her, asking that a loan she had made to him be set aside and that he be enjoined from drawing on a cash balance on deposit in the Third National Bank.

Judge Kimmel issued temporary injunctions against Hudson and the bank. They were cited to appear Friday and show cause why the injunctions should not be made permanent.

The case grows out of a curious transaction which is related in detail in the petition. Hudson told Post-Dispatch reporter that his defense would be that he had acted as an attorney for Miss Rowan, performing services for which he made a legitimate charge and that the loans involved were made voluntarily.

Estate of $3400.

Miss Rowan says that July 26 Hudson was called upon to draft the will of a John Devitt, who wished to leave his estate to her. The estate consisted of $3400 in certificates of deposit of the Boatmen's Bank.

July 31, it is charged, Devitt indorsed the certificates in blank to Elizabeth Rowan and Hudson got possession of them by representing to her that unless she gave them to him in this manner the Devitt will would have to be probated, 25 per cent of the property would be deducted for court costs and 20 per cent for collateral inheritance tax.

Hudson suggested, the petition says, that she pay him 20 per cent and he would collect the money. The plaintiff charges that after she had consented to this arrangement she learned that the collateral inheritance tax was only 5 per cent and that, as the property was given her before Devitt's death, there would be no inheritance tax at all.

Warned of Publicity.

Hudson also told her, she alleges, that if the matter got into the Probate Court, the Post-Dispatch would write a "humanitarian story" about the case similar to the account it published of the winning of a $10,000 moving picture scenario prize by Miss Ida Darnon, thereby causing the plaintiff much undesired publicity.

The petition also alleges that Hudson indorsed the certificates in blank, cashed them Aug. 2 and deposited the money to his own credit in the Third National Bank. When the plaintiff demanded an accounting she charges that Hudson charged her a fee of one-third of the whole amount for his services.

At his suggestion she says she allowed Hudson to retain $675 to invest for her and that later she lent him $1000 on his personal note. At different times he advanced her $507, giving her check for $184.45 on Aug. 26, after the loan was made.

Aug. 26, she says, on her demand she got another check for $463.58 and received a warrant deed to secure the rest; this deed the petition charges was of no value.

The petition asks that Hudson be compelled to produce Devitt's will and a blank piece of paper with his signature taken by the attorney at the same time, that the note for $1000 be canceled and that Hudson be compelled to give an accounting.

Hudson denied that he had told Miss Rowan anything about getting undesirable publicity. He declared he would be able to produce in court an adequate defense to all Miss Rowan's charges. He also says that he doesn't know what became of Devitt.

Hudson's Version of Case.

He said he had been Miss Rowan's attorney for about a year; that she did not at the time consider his 20 per cent fee for legal services as excessive; that she readily agreed to lend him the $1000 on his note when he explained an investment he intended to make; that he lent the first $675 to responsible persons on chattel mortgages at a good interest and that the warrant deed he had given to secure his own note was worth more than the amount of the loan.

As to the blank piece of paper, he said that it was a sheet on which Devitt, whom he described as about 50 years of age, had first tried his signature. He said he remembered destroying this paper after he returned to his office and found it crumpled up in his pocket.

SOCIETY

MRS. HARRY SAYLES KILBOURNE JR. is visiting her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Boyce, of 6312 Clemens avenue. Mrs. Kilbourne comes from Texas City, Tex., where her husband, Capt. Kilbourne, has been stationed with his regiment, the Fourth Field Artillery.

During the storm there recently their house was lifted from its foundation. The water was up to their shoulders and they had to be taken out on mule back. The camp, which was in the path of the storm, was virtually washed away.

Mrs. Kilbourne, who was Miss Mary Boyce and a belle a few years ago, will remain here until Capt. Kilbourne joins her, when they will go to their new station in Honolulu.

MISS CARLOTTA MAY PRATT was married this morning to Julian Patton of Newport News, Va., at the home of the bride's brother, Derrill B. Pratt, 6788 Berlin avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. L. Essex of the Episcopal Epiphany Mission.

The bride wore a traveling gown of blue cloth, and a corsage bouquet of lilacs of the valley and orchids. Her brother gave her in marriage and her sister, Mrs. C. N. Maxwell, who came on from Tuscaloosa, Ala., for the wedding, was matron of honor. The bridegroom's brother, Julian Patton of Virginia, was best man. Mr. Patton and his bride departed today for their honeymoon. They will reside in Newport News.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Pratt of Birmingham, Ala. She accompanied her mother here for a visit to her brother and his wife and it was decided that she would be married while here.

Mrs. Edward Brandstotter of 7400 Minnesota avenue has returned from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Paul Burmeister of Bessemer, Ala.

Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Edwards Breed of 944 Hamilton avenue and their son, David, will return Sept. 5 from Wequeton, Mich., where they have been spending the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Crowder of 107 Washington boulevard and their daughter, Miss Jeannette Elliott Crowder, will arrive in St. Louis soon from a summer trip in the East.

Mrs. R. J. Dyer, who has been spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. Taylor, in Shreveport, La., returned to her home at the Hamilton Hotel yesterday.

Mrs. Zoe Thomas Mitchell, formerly of Springfield, Mo., was hostess to Mr. and Mrs. Colin M. Selph at a luncheon given in Washington, D. C., Saturday. Later Mrs. Mitchell gave a motor party to the Selphs to the Lord Baltimore Club.

MAN, 65, SWINDLED OF $3500 BY FAKE "WIRE TAPPERS"

Resident of Rock Island, Ill., Raised $2000 of the Money by Mortgaging Home.

M. Beal, 65 years old, who has an express wagon business in Rock Island, Ill., told at Police Headquarters today how he was swindled of $3500 by fake wire tappers in Cheyenne, Wyo. He said $2000 of the money was obtained by mortgaging his home.

Beal visited headquarters for the purpose of looking at photographs of confidence men, in the hope of finding pictures of those who had swindled him. He did not find the pictures he sought.

Beal said he was in Colorado Springs, July 5, when a young man, a chance acquaintance, pointed out a man who was passing, and showed what appeared to be a newspaper clipping, telling of a big "killing" the man had made by betting on a "long-shot" race horse which won.

Beal made bold to introduce himself to the man, who was at first distant and distrustful, but who became friendly, and invited Beal and his young companion to go to Cheyenne with him.

There Beal was initiated into the mysteries of wire-tapping, and of winning large sums by bets made after the result of the race is known, but before the news reaches the poolrooms.

He bet $2500, he said, and was told soon after that he had won an equal amount, but that he must "put up" his $2500 as evidence of good faith before collecting the $2500 he had won. He returned to his home in Rock Island, drew $1500 from a bank and mortgaged his home for $2000.

He took the money to Cheyenne and gave it to one of the men, as required. He was to meet the man in Denver and receive $7000, but instead he got a message telling him to go to Kansas City. In Kansas City he was unable to find the man.

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength) and add to it 1/4 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—ADV.

American Guest of Japanese Premier.

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—Premier Count Okuma and members of his Cabinet gave a farewell luncheon today to Dr. R. B. Tiesler, who sails for the United States, Sept. 4, to complete arrangements for the establishment of St. Luke's International Hospital at Tokyo. Members of the Rockefeller Medical Mission to China were present at the luncheon.

Fine flour kept fine!

Valier's Enterprise Flour is packed and tightly sewed, by machinery, in new strong, clean cambric sacks; then loaded, under roof, into cars lined with new, clean paper; so that its purity and quality is protected from the mill to you.

Valier's Enterprise Flour

Valier's Enterprise Flour sometimes costs a little more by the sack; yet because it goes so much further in baking it really costs less; and then bread made from Valier's Enterprise Flour is always whiter, lighter, tastier and more nutritious and stays sweet and moist longer. Most acquainted with this superior flour today—your grocer will supply you.

WORK TO BEGIN ON NEW KANSAS CITY BRIDGE IN 10 DAYS

Day of the Opening of Old Hannibal Structure Over the Missouri Recalled.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1.—Within 10 days the construction of the piers that will support the new Burlington bridge across the Missouri River here will begin, according to J. H. Merriam, the engineer in charge. It will run near to the present Hannibal bridge and will take the place of that structure.

"Between 200 and 300 men will be employed the greater part of the winter in the construction of the bridge," Merriam said today. "The bridge will be a double-track structure. It will cost $1,500,000, according to present estimates. In the middle will be a draw span 456 feet long to permit the passage of steamers. The upper deck will be used for wagon traffic and the lower for railroad tracks. The southern end of the bridge will rest approximately where the southern end of the Hannibal bridge now is. The new structure, however, will bear to the west of the present bridge until the north end of it will be 200 feet from the north end of the structure now in use."

First Bridge Over Missouri. The present Hannibal bridge was the first bridge across the Missouri River. It was designed by Octave Chouteau, a celebrated engineer, and opened to the public July 4, 1882. That was one of the greatest days Kansas City ever experienced and attracted attention even in the East. The whole State was aroused and as many as could attended the celebration. It was not known as the Hannibal bridge in those days. The people just called it The Bridge and that was enough because The Bridge meant only one thing. Business and railroad men say that the Hannibal bridge made Kansas City.

A 120-page book, written by Chouteau, and containing 22 illustrations, was published at the time. In this book are tables showing that the cost of this bridge, built of wooden beams and iron rods, was $1,083,173.85. Later of course the wooden beams were taken out and the steel now in the bridge substituted. Experts say the bridge could have been built at a much smaller cost today, increase in the cost of materials notwithstanding, because the modern appliances and methods are so far in advance of those used at that time.

Arrived Before Daybreak. On the day of the opening of the old bridge the people began to arrive before daybreak. Long before time for the big parade, the surrounding bluffs were crowded. The parade was headed by the Lafayette Silver Corps Band and every class of vehicle, all decorated, and an endless line of footmen dressed in their best followed.

As the parade started to enter the bridge a halt was called as a highly decorated train, approaching from the northern entrance, "A train of 10 cars," as the newspaper account of the day has it, "drawn by the magnificent engine, Hannibal from the Hannibal and St. Joe Road." The train was decorated with flags and flowers and two of the cars "were of the very finest quality, being A. B. Pullman's celebrated palace sleeping cars."

After the parade and train had passed the draw span was swung around "with only four men at the levers" to let a gaily decorated steamboat pass through, which brought a mighty shout from the great crowd.

Gen. McClelland the Orator. The dedication ceremonies followed. Gen. Warwick Hough, chief marshal of the day, introduced Gen. John W. Reid, who, acting for the Mayor, welcomed all visitors. Then came a balloon ascension and a barbecue. After some music, Judge William Douglas introduced Gen. John A. McClelland of Illinois the orator of the day. Carl Schurz, then Senator from Missouri, was called upon to speak, but declaring that he had come to see and hear rather than talk, he turned Gen. Grant's phrase, "Let us have peace," into "Let us have dinner," and everybody consented.

At night there were fireworks and a banquet. The banquet table was decorated with a huge cake made in the shape of the Hannibal bridge and measuring 10 feet long by 2 feet wide.

PROSPERITY RUSHING INTO NATION, BANKERS DECLARE

Bank Reserves Greatest in History of Country, Says Head of Association, on Way to Convention. CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Bankers in Chicago today, on their way to attend the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association at Seattle, Wash., said that "almost unbelievable prosperity" is rushing into the nation. "When the bank reserves, which are greater now than they have ever been in the history of the country, are distributed, the nation will enjoy almost unbelievable prosperity," said William A. Law of Philadelphia, president of the American Bankers' Association. "The volume of money on hand is so great that it cannot find a natural outlet. The movement of the tremendous crops with the attendant financial activity will still further increase the bank reserves." Law attributed the present state of business to the upset condition prevailing in international trade relations and to a wave of economy.

STOCK HOLDINGS DOUBLY TAXED, BANKERS ASSERT

Demand That State Board of Equalization Reduce Their Their Assessment.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 1.—When representatives of St. Louis banks appeared before the State Board of Equalization today to demand that they be released from paying taxes on stock held by them in other corporations, Attorney General Barker, a member of the board and its legal adviser, told the bankers that if the board complied with their request, they could convert their entire surplus accounts into stocks of other corporations and thus be exempted from taxation on a large portion of their property.
George Wilson of the Mercantile Trust Co. who seemed to be acting as spokesman for the bankers, assured Barker that the banks had no such intention.
He insisted that when the banks paid taxes on the stock of other companies owned by them it amounted to double taxation, because the corporation itself paid taxes on its own property. Barker told him that was the same condition which existed in regard to land and all other property that is mortgaged or is doubly owned.

City Counselor Dumes and Assessor Schramm appeared for the city, but did not recommend that the State board take any action either way. Dumes said the city of St. Louis merely wanted to find out "where we are."

The bankers contended that under the present arrangement they are assessed on 54 per cent of their holdings, when they really should be assessed on only 50 per cent.
The Board of Equalization of St. Louis, they said, had agreed to deduct from their assessment the amount of stock held in other corporations, but Dumes intimated that if the State Board reduced the total of their assessment by 4 per cent, the city board might raise the proportion, which would offset the action of the State Board, since their assessment is based entirely on the return of the City Assessor. The board took the matter under consideration.

WATER USER ASKS FOR WARRANT FOR CLAUDE B. BURTON

Request Withdrawn, However,
When Water Assessor Agrees to Reinspect Property.

A warrant charging oppression in office against Claude B. Burton, Assessor of Water Rates, was applied for yesterday by E. G. Bartlett, 1427 McCausland avenue, and, after a conference with Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Wilson, Burton agreed to reinspect Bartlett's premises to determine if he was properly charged with a hose license.

The inspector who made the investigation this morning reported that Bartlett had no hose.
Bartlett and his attorney, Charles Comer, called on Burton yesterday to demand that a charge of $4 for hose license be eliminated from a bill received by Bartlett in June. Burton declined, and John B. Owen, collector of water rates, told Bartlett and Comer that he could not accept payment for less than the full amount shown on the bill. Owen said it was the duty of Burton's department to correct any errors in the bill, making a reinspection of the property if necessary.

Bartlett, accompanied by Robert Ecoff, a clerk in Owen's office, returned to Burton's office and demanded that another inspection be made and the bill be corrected. Bartlett then made application for a warrant,
on the advice of his attorney.

Water Commissioner Wall and Burton were summoned to the Prosecuting Attorney's office, and after a conference from which Bartlett was excluded, Burton announced that he would have a reinspection made, and Bartlett did not press his request for a warrant.

Comer said this morning that he was preparing a petition for a damage suit
by Bartlett against Burton and Water Commissioner Wall for $5,000, because Bartlett's water was turned off for 24 hours. Comer said Bartlett would ask $500 actual and $5,000 punitive damages.

Model New Steel Rolling Mill of St. Louis Screw Company OPERATED ELECTRICALLY

The St. Louis Screw Company's Mill is one of St. Louis' largest industries, and after thoroughly investigating the various methods and cost of power supply, closed a contract for Union Electric Service, knowing it to be the most reliable, flexible and economical service obtainable.

QUALITY OUR MOTTO

Gentlemen:—
In designing our new rolling mill, it was our aim to secure maximum efficiency in every department.
Reliability and cost of power is a very important factor in this business and we installed Union Electric Service only after a very thorough investigation of all other classes of power supply. We have now been operating for several months and our experience indicates that we made no mistake in selecting your service. We find it not only reliable and economical but, with it, are able to produce a larger and better finished product. Also, owing to the great flexibility of motor arrangement, important economies of space have been secured.

SPECIAL WORK OF EVERY DESCRIPTION

We are now using more than 2500 HP. in electric motors and have a capacity of 50,000 tons of bar iron and steel per year. Ultimately this capacity will be considerably increased, necessitating a total motor installation of approximately 4000 HP.

GALVANIZING NONE BETTER

Very truly yours,

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Fire Protection in Webster Groves.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As a member of the Webster Groves City Council and as chairman of the Fire Committee of that body, I desire to ask that you publish this statement in reply to a communication printed in your Letters from the People over the signature of our worthy citizen, Mr. David I. Zucker.

As information for Mr. Zucker and others who labor under the same misapprehension, let it be said that there is now in the hands of our City Attorney ordinances relating to a building code, building inspection, wire inspection and inspection of premises. There was recently passed by the City Council, on recommendation of the Fire Committee, an ordinance creating an establishment, a fire company, owned and controlled by the city, to be composed of not less than eight nor more than 15 men. The chief of that company has already been appointed and the company has been launched, with a membership of 12 men. The Fire Committee of the Council and the entire Council is now co-operating with the City League of Webster on a plan, the details of which we are not at this time prepared to disclose, but which will within the next six months bring to our city that measure of protection which is necessary to reduce our rating as a city from a four and one-half to a three and one-half class, in the classification of the Fire Underwriters' Bureau, and will mean a reduction of from 33 to 50 per cent in our insurance rates. We ask, therefore, that our worthy citizens withhold criticism until this plan matures.

Of course, Mr. Zucker overlooks the important fact that our annexation would put into full force and effect the building regulations of St. Louis, which would at once prohibit the erection of any more frame dwellings and would prevent any alterations in those already constructed. Has Mr. Zucker stopped to consider what, if any, effect that would have on the value of existing improved property, 90 per cent of which is improved with frame dwellings? In conclusion, permit me to say that a general conflagration in our city is impossible, owing to the distance between our dwellings. We are not cooped up on 25-foot lots like our St. Louis friends; each citizen clears his premises of rubbish; no foul-smelling ash pits adorn our lots at the rear, as they do in the city, menacing our health and our property, and at the present time we have a greater fire-fighting force and more adequate apparatus per capita than four out of five of the outlying districts of St. Louis.

Missouri Protects Its Girls.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your editorial criticizing Georgia for fixing the age of consent at 10 years, you state that in Missouri it is 14. This was true until 1912, when the age of consent was raised in this state to 18, and the punishment may be death, or imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than five years. But Missouri has gone even further and extends its protection to any unmarried female of previous chaste character, between the ages of 16 and 18 years of age, by punishing the penalty of the crime against such females a felony. See Missouri decisions Acts, 1913, page 218.

Proposed Increase in War Taxes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I read in Monday morning's Republic that the United States Government intends to extend the so-called war tax so they can raise $75,000,000 to $200,000,000 more. I think it a great injustice to the people of this country. As a business man I think it very advisable to tax the munitions that are going out of this country, regardless to what nation it may be. As long as we are helping those idiots who are fighting one another, by sending munitions, etc., I suppose the longer we will pay war tax.

This Summer's Weather.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

What's the matter with our weather prophet? He predicts rain, and that's all right, but yesterday he sent broadcast all over the country the temperature of St. Louis as 78 degrees minimum and 88 degrees maximum.

Now, I am a close observer of the thermometer, and at my country place "Albee" best registered 18 degrees at 7 o'clock a. m. and no higher than 23 degrees all day. I had a fire in my library fireplace, and it felt good, and I have had it there night and morning nearly all "summer." We haven't had any heat.

No wonder St. Louis is referred to as a "hot spot" away, when such false reports are sent out. To better summer resort in the United States, a very resident of St. Louis County can testify to the heat, no mosquitoes. Get after the weather prophet.

CIVILIZATION WINS.

Ambassador von Bernstorff's official assurance that the German Government accepts the principle, insisted upon by the United States, that merchant ships shall be warned before attack, in accordance with international law, practically settles the issue between Germany and America on submarine warfare.

The German Ambassador's statement embodies the guarantee that American rights, international law and the rules of humanity will be observed by Germany in her undersea war. This is the fundamental principle for which our Government has fought and it may be assumed that the concession carries with it all incidentals. Admitting the rightfulness of the President's position, Germany cannot withhold satisfaction for violation of the principle.

To say that this is a diplomatic victory for President Wilson expresses the conclusion of the great struggle for ocean rights in narrow terms. It was a diplomatic victory for the President in the sense that he used diplomatic means alone to gain his end; while insisting upon our rights and the obligation of international law, he appealed to reason with patience but invincible firmness and intellectual force; without bullying, threats or resort to physical power. He is entitled to the credit of conducting to a successful conclusion, under delicate and dangerous conditions, a great campaign for law and human rights by strong and skillful methods of reason. That back of his reasoning was the power of a resourceful people does not detract from the merit of the work.

Americans who were killed in the lawless attacks of German submarines have not died in vain. Their deaths forced the United States to protest against the manner of their taking off and to demand that lawless methods of warfare cease. Through the protest of the United States the principle of law and humanity was rescued from destruction in the maelstrom of war madness. No other nation was capable of achieving the task.

In this moral victory for neutral rights and humanitarian Germany shares. She has yielded to conscience and has been saved with other nations from the consequences of her mistakes.

Civilization wins.

All our differences with Europe should be settled by the time Liberty Bell starts for home.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

The continued fall of foreign exchange in this country is becoming a matter of profound moment to our business as well as to general interests concerned. It is placing so high a premium on the prices of American goods as may seriously interfere with our export trade. It is making stock-market prices so much higher for the foreign owners of American securities than for the home owners as to create an almost irresistible invitation to foreign liquidation. We are getting into a situation of unprecedented perfection from the old mercantilist theory of foreign trade, where the merchandise movement is all outward and nothing comes back except gold, which we cannot profitably employ. But it is a situation which cannot continue without stopping the exports as well as the imports.

"Where is my wandering boy tonight?" is good Industrial School music just now.

PROGRESS OF THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

The strike of thousands of workers which has caused a shutdown of the long-established firearms plants at Bridgeport, Conn., and the many other metal-working plants of the town given over to that industry since the beginning of the war, has been settled with the concession of an eight-hour day.

This present 1915 may be known as the eight-hour year. This victory at Bridgeport is only one of a long series of victories won during recent months for shorter hours of toil. Automobile plant after automobile plant, munitions factory after munitions factory, industrial establishments of many sorts have been brought into conformity with the old union demand, "eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight hours for recreation." The progress in this direction will stand as one of the most important features when the labor record of the year comes to be made up. It may be found that it exceeds the accomplishment of all prior years in the United States.

No such advance could have been made in so brief a time except under the unusual industrial conditions prevailing in consequence of the convulsion abroad. That the war, along with the unimaginable distress it has brought to brother workers in Europe, has in its train some social justice benefits for workers in America, is pleasant to record.

THE DRUG HABIT.

It is gratifying to know the number of drug fiends in the country is much smaller than generally supposed. Martin I. Wilbert, technical assistant in the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States, after careful investigation, is convinced the number is overestimated.

The investigator found an interesting source of information in the reports of the enforcement of the Tennessee anti-narcotic law, by Lucian P. Brown, State Food and Drug Commissioner. He states that after 12 months of operation there were registered in the State 2370 persons addicted to drugs. Strange to say, of this number only 794 were males, while 1586 were females. Now, as the population of Tennessee is about 3 per cent of the United States, if the habit was generally distributed the number of drug habitues would not be far in excess of 118,000 people.

The cause of the drug habit is also discussed by Mr. Wilbert. He quotes a report by C. E. Terry, health officer of Jacksonville, Fla., after an exhaustive study of 213 cases. In this number he found 84.6 per cent were caused by doctors' prescriptions, 21.6 per cent by advice of acquaintances, and 24 per cent by chronic diseases. This would prove that fully 95 per cent acquire the habit innocently and in ignorance of its horrible results. Considering that it takes only 30 days of daily use of a drug to acquire the habit, and that after 90 days it can only be cured by medical aid, too great care cannot be observed by doctors in prescribing drugs.

The people of Missouri cannot be educated up to the depletion of school funds.

LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE SAFE.

The secret history of the plan to rob the State school fund shows that it was not merely the result of an informal understanding between two State officials with personal political ambitions to serve.

It was a formal meeting of the State Board of Equalization held in May, at which the imminence of a treasury deficit was officially recognized and the organized conspiracy to get a little easy money by climbing the porch and shaking the children's bank was elaborated.

Messrs. Barker and Gordon were only carrying out parts assigned them by the board as a matter of fiscal policy when they gave the plan the indorsement of professional judgment and made the computation that short-changed the beneficiaries of primary education in Missouri.

It appears, then, that the responsibility for this crime against the little red schoolhouse rests with the following gentlemen, not as accessories and abettors, but as principals:

ELLIOTT W. MAJOR, GOVERNOR.
CORNELIUS ROACH, SECRETARY OF STATE.

JOHN T. BARKER, ATTORNEY-GENERAL.
JOHN P. GORDON, STATE AUDITOR.

EDWIN P. DEAL, STATE TREASURER.

With the whole administration implicated and the State aroused to scorn, Messrs. Barker and Gordon naturally decline to be the goats. Mr. Barker hastily reverses his first legal opinion, which never was anything more than "probably" correct, anyway. Mr. Gordon says that the court case ought to be pressed to a determination, to prevent any uncertainty in the future, which is logical enough. But he solemnly promises that if the judgment is adverse, the $514,593 he subtracted from the fund will be kept intact in the treasury until its apportionment to the schools can be authorized at the next legislative session.

That, however, a court decision, as Mr. Gordon suggests, or a more expeditious wording of the law, as Mr. Barker suggests, is indispensable if future offenses of the sort are to be avoided may be doubted. It will be a long time before any other set of audacious Missouri officials, no matter what their political or financial necessities, will attempt to expropriate themselves from difficulties by plundering the common-school fund.

The local Democratic organ charges the deficiency in the State revenue and the plundering of the school funds to the Constitution. What's the Constitution between political friends?

THE SWAPPING WE DID ABROAD.

Exports from the United States last year reached $2,788,600,000—more than three times as much as we ever exported in any 12 months 20 years ago and more than five times as much as we exported 30 years ago.

But we must not be too complacent over the figures. The money we got for these exports will remain here and increase the national wealth and the trade power that comes from wealth. We must remember, however, that the weakening in foreign competition that permitted this volume of business is for the moment only.

The great majority of our exports were cotton and foodstuffs, and the demand for the latter will decrease as soon as the war ends. We have spared this great total in commodities without deprivation at home or burdensome increase in prices. Assuming that our surplus remains as large as at present, what will we do with it when foreign demand has shrunk to peace proportions?

The question we should ask ourselves is, what have we accomplished in winning permanent markets, instead of supplying eager buyers from temporary markets? Have we profited as much by the misfortunes of others as foreign competitors profited during the first year of our war? Our great weakness is lack of transportation to South America, Africa, the Far East. What have we done to strengthen ourselves in this respect? Have we made any progress in the work of placing our trade in those quarters of the globe on a stable, enduring footing?

We have supplied deficiencies in foreign parts due to the transfer of men from industry to armies. But should the war end tomorrow, would it be found that we really had done very much in availing ourselves of the greatest opportunity presented a commercial nation in history?

Corruption, not ammunition, is killing Russia.

CONSERVING THE GOOSE.

In rejecting a revamped tango, a dance full of cortes, demicortes, mediacortes and other intricate steps dear to the profession, in favor of what they call the old dances, the Philadelphia dancing masters show a becoming discretion. Signs have not been wanting that the dance professors were killing the goose that has been laying golden eggs for them through their too great ingenuity in devising new steps. Apparently they have seen a light and are prudently adapting themselves to the changing conditions.

That the dance craze is waning there seems to be no doubt, particularly among dancers past youth's prime, whose interest gave it added impetus. If their patronage was not to be wholly alienated, some halt had to be called on the multiplication of new dances and this the dancing masters are apparently now planning to do. The "old" dances in question, the fox trot, one step and canter, are not exactly antique. They have survived the maelstrom of maxixe, Argentine, hop-trots and what not, and as dances offering a line of least resistance to the learner may retain a vogue which the more complicated steps speedily lost. Elderly observers fail to see much poetry of motion in them. But there they are, an example of the best that ragtime dancing can produce, and there they bid likely to stay until cobwebs grow on the last of the tango parlors. How far in the future is that day?

SEPTEMBER.

September gets its name from the Latin septem (seven), and has come down to us from antiquity without change in a single letter. Efforts were made to change it, but after the Roman Emperor Germanicus was murdered for attempting to name it for himself, it was left undisturbed. The Romans were sentimental about September. It was then that Lucullus, who from time to time invited all the front people to his celebrated dinners, resumed serving oysters. The Roman Senators wound up their chautauque engagements and had time for the political affairs of the empire. In the cool of the late evening along the Appian Way there was nothing cheerier than a little Roman punch. The Roman armies usually did better in September. They had more zest for battle, and there was something fascinating about camping out. The frost-kissed pawpaw, of which Cicero said that if he ever ate one he would eat them all, appeared in the fruit stalls along the Tiber. It was in September that the little romanite apple was ripe, and one passing the house of Horace at almost any hour of the night could hear that sweet singer intoning the praises of little romanite cider. In that month, too, Venus was evening star, and inspired by the beauty of that bright planet in the western sky after a good Roman dinner, even strong men like Caesar sometimes strummed their lutes softly and sweetly sang.

It was on September 26, 329 A. D., that Constantine the Great founded Constantinople. All the Romans realized that Rome would some day fall, and Constantine was disposed to put that off as long as possible. He moved the capital of the empire to Constantinople, built a great wall around the city, fortified the Dardanelles, and then invited the enemies of Rome to come on. It took them eleven hundred years, or apparently about as long as it will take the allies, to take it. The Turks turned the trick. Landing their forces at the entrance to the Dardanelles, and supporting their army with four or five hundred flatboats filled with Mohammedans hurling naval oranges, they finally blew the plug out of the historic Narrows and grabbed the Pearl of the East like a Russian prisoner of war helping himself to the kartofole salad.

The festive calf will sniff the breeze
And do a fancy dance for Fall,
And bite of red among the trees
Will yank the harp from Tara's walls.
The hired man will bawl for more
And thicker blankets on the bed,
The furnace will begin to roar
And paint the sky a little red,
The plumber will begin his drive
Against the twenty dollar bill,
The cunning ice man will contrive
To do a little business still,
The warring continent will shout
The claims of Orusset and of Krupp,
And the summer girl will boast about
The freckles she has covered up.

There is no season quite the same as that impending just ahead, when all the hunters go for game and fill the firmament with lead. The wild duck cruising down the sky begins to cast about for traps, the cedar press begins to sigh, and all the doodlebugs collapse. The crowd around the soda fountain will drink to summer and dispense, the eager poet will recount his sweet experience in verse. The harvest moon will sell the sky as calm as Wilson in dispute, T. Roosevelt, with hue and cry, will search for someone he can shoot, the boy will sadly gaze from school upon the Paradise he lost, the mornings will be fresh and cool, with all the foliage embossed, the local army of defense will drill upon the village green, and the farmer in his opulence will buy himself a limousine. The Kaiser's submarines will prey about as cautiously as cats, and all our people will display their cockydoos on their hats. There won't be any more of that free shooting at whatever floats. Our Uncle Sam has come to bat and woe the cable out with notes. The man who guards the periscope will watch for Yankees when in doubt, and seeing none will have to hope there are none anywhere about. A big gold chain or diamond pin is all he needs to make it plain. The admiral will simply grin and drop beneath the raging main. Our Uncle Sam is very firm concerning whether we may fare. It may make other people squirm, but we are going anywhere. Across the sea, or by the shore of whatsoever leaguered land, we go where we have gone before, nor are our persons contraband. The submarine will have to bide by law and custom for the sword, or some nabob will lose his hide to Edison or Henry Ford.

At any rate, the eager moth
Will fall upon the Palm Beach suit,
And citizens in khaki cloth
Will do their best to learn to shoot.
The bracing fragrance of the air
Will give us all a little pep,
And men with feathers in their hair
Will try the military step.
The flowers blooming for a day
Will droop eternally and die,
And the wild goose, who has been away,
Will sound his saxon in the sky.

September is sometimes called the loveliest of all months. It usually opens with a light fire in the fireplace, and works up gradually to a furnace fire about the 24th, when the sun crosses the equator and officially opens the football season. The September equinox, as this is known, closes the sun's northern season, and institutes that perfection of all perfections known as Indian summer. The entire month is carefully covered by the sodas. The first twenty days are influenced by Leo, the fifth sign, and the last ten days by Virgo, the sixth sign. People born in the first sign are great fighters, and devote a great deal of their time to drilling and other preparations for war. They usually spend the month of August in camp, and if there is a war they ordinarily qualify as officers and thus escape any great danger of getting shot. Virgo people, upon the other hand, are for peace, and keep the coals of that good cause alive during wet times. They are about the last people to go to war, but they are usually the first the enemy sees.

The moon will be full on the 23d. Mr. Rockefeller will not have any birthday this month, and the price of gasoline will not go up. We will have good weather. It will be more like the weather we had all the time Mr. Taft was President than any we have had since. Jupiter has done very well as evening star, and will be retained in that position for a while.

And then October will recur,
As lovely as a Persian rug,
And cider will begin to stir
In many a little hidden jug.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

CHARLIE.—Hair lotion: Air and sunshine; crude petroleum; salt; castor oil; hemlock; soap and vinegar; seaweed and apple seed boiled in sea water; dandelion tea; plain tea; bay-rue; tea; boiled potato water and salt. Dr. Millington recommends a mixture of two grains bicarbonate of soda, one ounce of yucca, and one ounce of linseed oil. Soak the hair growth by massage daily and through use of the hair brush.

A. C.—Cucumber cream: Slice with out peeling three good-sized cucumbers, when enough to set; put into half cup water and boil until whole is pulpy. Strain, cool and add equal quantity alcohol. If there is at once and a half of each, there will be three ounces cucumber essence. Powder quarter ounce pure castile soap and let it dissolve in the essence all night. In morning add half ounce sweet almond oil and 15 drops tincture of benzoin. Have ready eight ounces cucumber juice made by steaming six sliced cucumbers until soft; rub through a colander, then strain through muslin, add this to the mixture, melt ounce white wax and beat the whole until creamy. Benzoin is merely a preservative.

CLEANSING.

S. E. P.—You might try magnesia, with soft brush, to clean California nose beads.

LAURA.—Most indelible inks contain nitrate of silver, the stain of which may be removed by steeping in a solution of common salt and afterward washing with ammonia; or use solution of 10 grains of crystals of potassium and five grains of iodine to one ounce of water, or a solution of eight parts each of chloride of mercury and chloride of ammonium in 100 parts of water. (We don't know whether this would clean ivory.)

HEALTH HINTS.

MAY.—To develop the bust the following exercise is beneficial: Double your arms as tightly as you can, bring your arms raised so high to be horizontal. While keeping your arms on a level with your shoulders slowly separate your arms and widely as possible measure and eat fat-making foods, sleep a good deal and don't worry. Deep breathing also will help to enlarge the breasts try gentle massage with a skin nutrient, round and upward along the glands. Hard pressure of any kind has a tendency to flatten them, and if you wear forms see that they are the lightest possible. The best are those which are a framework of wire or whalebone that does not touch anywhere.—Lillian Russell in Chicago Herald.

LAW POINTS.

R.—Lessor can proceed against "C" regardless of facts you state.

AGED.—Laws do not require children to support aged and infirm parents. It does not punish ingratitude.

POOR WOMAN.—They are allowed no 10 days' time, as they claim, and owe you for full time. See Justice of Peace as to suit.

HIRAM.—You can sue on the promise to refund the sum stated, but you will find collection very expensive if compelled to sue.

W. W. W.—As to what the suit you contemplate may cost you, we cannot say. The amount involved doesn't seem to justify going to law; besides, it does not appear you have a very good case.

READER.—Whether or not divorced wife is childless has nothing to do with alimony, which is whatever the Court may make. Alimony is made payable all at once, sometimes otherwise.

MRS. B.—If you have satisfied the mortgage they carry on the property, they can collect it by suit if not paid 3 years after maturity for the purchase of the goods.

WITNESS.—Subpoena issued by Justice of Peace shall be served by reading same to witness or delivering it to him a copy thereof. Refusal of witness to hear or take copy, such refusal shall be sufficient service of process on him.

C. W. R.—From appearance it seems you may be held liable through your agency while the party contracting in your behalf for the sale of land. You should have dealt direct after seeing how matters were running and calling his authority.

G. L.—If stock is full paid the no comeback to you; creditors what they can get out of it is as much as they can get. If not full paid, stockholders liable only for such unpaid capital stock. The property cannot be taken from you.

G. E. P.—Write clerk of place where certificate was issued as to the formality necessary to make the change. An affidavit filed may be sufficient and it may not. When writing, indicate self-addressed stamped envelope, assuring reply. The cost may also be ascertained when writing.

H. A. A. R.—We see nothing serious about the matter. When lease expires do not extend; make a new one. The error is apparent and you have no trouble in proving it if same becomes necessary. Do not agree to a substituting as well as upon a new lease being executed. If possible, get cancellation of present lease and execute another as a precaution.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TOM.—Any good patty is right for plumbing.

G. J.—Billie Wheeler Wilcox, Short Beach, Conn.

X.—Worcester, Worcester; Worcester, Worcester.

F. F. B.—Lumber for heat built is treated with creosote.

NO. 4.—Try writing Agricultural College, Columbia, Mo.

GOLF.—For rules, try Public Library or sporting goods store.

D. P. B.—Area of St. Louis County, 82 sq. miles; acres, 52,800.

V. T.—There are no marriages of Catholic priests after ordination.

ISO.—Col. George W. Goethals' home is at Culebra, Canal Zone, Panama.

J. L. Q.—Jennings has water and gas, real estate agents about ground.

SCENARIO.—Write Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C., for copyright information.

J. W. G.—American Journal of Nursing, Baltimore, Md.; Trained Nurse and Hospital Review, New York.

LOUISE.—Salary of teacher of domestic science, first year, $90; is increased until in fourth year it is $110.

J. A. Q.—Saline is county seat of Dent County, Mo.; on Price 17 miles from St. Louis; population, 175.

ANKIOW.—Efficiency Board does not ask applicant for playground employment what she does with her salary.

CHURCHILL.—What was formerly in Bellefontaine road, just not Tenth street, Broadway and Eleventh were parts of the road.

FRISCO.—Mill Creek sewer flood was not "eliminated," but there was not as much of it as in past years. Union Station basement was flooded.

A. B.—The European cannon-boat has not affected the California dry season, and everybody does not think it caused the heavy summer rains either.

TESTER.—There is no simple home test for wood alcohol substituted for grain alcohol in food. It is not known by odor, but the odor is not present in refined wood alcohol.

C. T. R.—A finger is a finger, and there is no way to tell whether it would make one finger kill another, that principle be admitted, why not say the first finger kills all subsequent ones?

The only fair rule, founded on the bedrock of justice is that every finger should count two for the law. That makes it, regardless of the question of priority. The detective agency that makes a finger that keeps its position till the end of the line, as a finger that is knocked off the peg does not count as all—Quint ap.

Lucinda's Awakening

The shattering of a young stenographer's dream showed her the worth of true love and brought a happy answer to her faithful sweetheart.

By Frank Filson.

"In heaven's name, why 'Lucinda'?" her Uncle Joe had asked when the baby was christened. Lucinda's mother could not explain. But to her mind Lucinda was the acme of a romantic name, and the thought that her little girl was to be a beauty, and to marry a rich man was the secret solace into poor, plain Lucinda's head. So when her mother was dead, and Lucinda found herself hired at $8 a week as a stenographer in a metropolitan business house, she cast about her to see who was going to fall in love with her.

Mr. Dixon, the manager, was the ideal of most of the young girls. Thirty, attractive, indispensable and with private means, their aspirations soared toward Mr. Dixon as a fledgling toward the freedom of the air. Lucinda had been nearly a month with the firm before she discovered that she was really plain, dowdy and unattractive, although an excellent worker.

Disillusionment is the test of character. To Lucinda it brought bitterness. The false ideas on which she had been nourished proved an indigestible pabulum. She saw around her girls far less conspicuous, far less able, earning more money, and she attributed it to their personality and looks.

She knew that she was not unattractive when expensively groomed. Her savings went for clothes—not for the outside world, but for office work. The outside world was represented simply by Tom Smith, a plodding young fellow who had in him, without Lucinda's knowledge, the germs of future success. He was earning $25 in an insurance office, and he had pressed Lucinda to marry him almost since the time when they were school children together in Mapleville.

They had been almost engaged; but when they met in the city the glamour of the office was on Lucinda. "I know I'm not worthy of you, dear," Tom would plead hard, "but at least I'll be true to you and care for you, Lucinda. I'll be getting thirty soon, and then—"

Lucinda repulsed him almost angrily, but Tom, who had guessed in a measure what was the matter with Lucinda, bided his time and refused to be shaken off. Half scornfully the girl allowed him to take her out on Saturday nights. And all the while they talked there was a large picture of Mr. Dixon in Lucinda's heart.

Gets Her Rival's Job.

MAEL KEARNEY was the girl in whom Lucinda saw her most dangerous rival. Mabel and Mr. Dixon were the greatest friends. It was bitter when Lucinda, approaching the manager on some point of business, mostly invented, felt herself a wet sponge upon the conversation. But though Mabel, earning $15, earned Lucinda's hatred, she seemed blithely unaware of it. Her friendly greetings were gall and wormwood to Lucinda's heart.

Lucinda's Paris gown was the sensation of the office. It was a modest gown, but it had no business there. A suddenly acquired hauteur was also a marked feature of Lucinda in those days. However, envy as much as mirth

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR GIRL

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MARRIED man is merely a bachelor who has proposed once too often.

The hardest problem of the average girl's life is how to reform a young man with one hand, while she lets him hold the other.

Alas! It is so difficult to find just the happy medium between a man whose impatience to begin making love to you shocks you, and one whose patience gets on your nerves.

A fascinating man can win almost any woman he wants in this world, but the trouble is that that kind of man never knows just which woman he wants.

When a man goes about calling himself a fool he fancies that the admission not only atones for his folly, but gives him a license to go right on being as foolish as he likes.

No woman was ever kissed "against her will." There is a look of warning in a woman's eye that freezes the most audacious man's impertinence into stone, and makes his conscience strike through and button right up the back.

There is only enough material in every heart for one real love in a lifetime, all the rest are merely its warmed-over remnants served with a different sauce.

The time for repentance is between the temptation and the kiss—no man will believe you, afterward.

A woman may save a man from his enemies, from his sins, or from his temptations, but never from his foolishness.

There is nothing on earth quite so uninteresting to a man as a happily married woman; but fortunately there are not enough of the species to mar the gaiety of nations.

was aroused by her appearance. And so she set forth to the conquest of Mr. Dixon.

Mabel Kearney had an attack of pneumonia in the early days of winter, and Lucinda was promoted to her place. It almost took her breath away. The salary was the same, but the presence of the manager was a constant inspiration. For the first few days she almost cried when she left the office; but afterward things began to go swimmingly. Dixon, who was a kindly man, insensibly adapted himself to the girl's nature; they got along very well, and even discussed things in that afternoon interval when office routine begins to slacken.

"You're doing very well, Miss Barrett," said the manager encouragingly. "And now I'm going to tell you something. When Miss Kearney leaves next month I'm going to ask to have you made my secretary in her place, at the salary."

"I didn't know Miss Kearney was going," faltered Miss Barrett.

"Oh—well, it's a sort of secret," said the manager, smiling, "but she's going to be married. I'm glad she's on the mend, poor girl."

"Yes," said Lucinda. And she almost danced out of the office that night. Mabel's leaving was nothing to Dixon, and he had resolved that she should fill her place. He had talked and joked with Mabel, and it had all meant nothing!

It happened that that night Tom, unable to endure his treatment any longer, came to Lucinda's boarding house, resolved to put his fortune to the final test.

"See here, Lucy," he said, taking her hand in his. "I guess you don't care for me any more. I've tried my hardest, but if I can't make you love me, why, of course, I'll let you go. Do you think there is any chance for me, dear?"

"Tom you are so absurd."

"But you have never answered me."

"Why should you pester me?"

Tom rose up with dignity and took his hat. For the first time he was really angry with her. Lucinda, seeing his face, felt a new awe of Tom.

"I won't pester you any more, Lucy," he said. "But I'm going to wait one month—just one month, for you to find out if you can care for me. I think when you don't see me, perhaps then you'll be able to know better. Good-by, dear."

The Wedding Surprises Lucinda.

HE was gone before Lucinda could recover her breath. She stamped when he had gone, and cried. How she hated him!

And the days passed. There was no doubt that Mr. Dixon really cared for her. It was true he had been even more animated with Mabel, but then he cared nothing for Mabel, lively little beauty that she was. Lucinda felt that she had a great deal in common with Mr. Dixon. They drew very close together in that time of Mabel's illness.

When the day came for Mabel to resume her place, and Lucinda was relegated to her old desk, she anticipated the time when she would permanently be Mr. Dixon's secretary. She felt that a love such as she hoped to inspire must be of slow growth. But when she saw Mabel, less animated now, taking Mr. Dixon's notes, she pitied her. She had tried and lost. Lucinda decided the Paris gown, which she had gathered, was too stylish for business. She could win on her merits now.

About a week after Mabel's return the manager called Lucinda to his desk. "It's all right about that position," he said, extending his hand to her. "Miss Kearney leaves at the end of the week, you know, and after we come back from our honeymoon—what, didn't you know? Why, all the girls have been chaffing me for weeks about it!"

Poor little Lucinda, shut up in her fool's paradise!

"And I want you," went on the manager. "I told Mr. Jaffray you are the most sensible girl in the office, and that we get on famously together."

It was the hardest effort Lucinda ever made, not to burst into tears in front of him. But that night, at home, she realized the depths of her folly. And in her humiliation, she sat down and wrote a long letter to Tom, telling him everything.

That this was the surest foundation for winning back his love was evidenced from the fact that Lucinda turned the tables on Mr. Dixon three months later, when she announced her resignation "to get married."

Paris Fashions

PARIS, AUG. 18.

THE exhibitions of autumn and winter models, which most of the leading Paris dressmakers have opened, demonstrate most thoroughly the fact that, whatever effect the war may have had on the social and economic life of France, Paris still remains the fashion center of the world.

One of the first things one notices is the absence of the more exaggerated military models. The horrifying imitations of British infantry colonels or Belgian lancers that startled every one last spring have been killed by the ridicule of the cartoonists.

Practically the only suggestion of military style that remains is the Muscovite effect produced by fur trimmings—principally silver-pointed Kolinsky—on dark blue or dark green velvet afternoon walking frocks, though there is, perhaps, still a slight reminiscence of the Belgian officers in the gold tassels that are freely worn as ornamental trimmings.

Silks are as short as ever, or even shorter, but much more voluminous. Six or seven yards of circumference is not uncommon, and in one of the best houses there is a frock that only needs hoops to be a crinoline! It is an afternoon model in black velvet, and the skirt is in alternate circles of velvet and black mousseline de soie.

History seems to repeat itself in the round Revolutionary collars one sees everywhere, as well as the Gironde and position styles. Some pretty princess frocks are also shown, and for the first time short evening gowns are fairly general, and in several cases the effect is anything but happy.

One model shown which is sure to be

Why the Moon Grows Dark

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

MANY, oh, ever so many years ago, before there was anything grown-up, when all the horses were colts and all the dogs puppies, and all the cats little kittens, the stars were made and painted all bright and shiny with light, just as you see them now on a clear night.

They were all very large, however, and so, in order not to crowd one another, they said:

"Let us all get off a long, long dis-

the rage and to be copied extensively is a reversible mitor coat, velvet on one side and serge on the other; both dark blue in color, or, in another variation, blue serge and "tulle crepe," for we'll weather.

Another feature of the season is the success of fur-trimmed "sweater" blouses in silk or wool, mostly in dark colors, for outdoor wear. These are meant to be worn with tailor-made or walking costumes. Many of these sweaters have already been seen in the Bois and at Evian, Vichy, and on one or two other fashionable resorts that have survived the war, and they are being eagerly copied.

Owing to the demands of the armistice on woollen and cloth manufacturers, velvet is certainly the favorite material. One sees it everywhere, in all shades and in all classes of frocks. Fails is also used extensively, and for evening wear, metal brocade silks, trimmed with gold and silver laces. Furs will be little worn this year, except as trimmings, but in that capacity they are everywhere, and some delightful evening and theater gowns in cerise and violet velvets are trimmed with fur to match.

When the other stars saw what the moon was doing they were very much disgusted with her.

"That vain little piece!" they twinkled one to another. "She ought to have the conceit taken out of her!"

Then Arcturus, a smart old star, got

tance into the sky, where we will have plenty of room, each one for himself, and not be jostling one another or fussing and moving against each other to make room like children in a trundle bed." So they all moved out and out and out, farther and farther into the sky, until, they looked no bigger than candles, just as you see them today.

Now, among the stars there was one called the Moon. She was not a very big star at all; indeed, she was one of the very smallest. But, like all very small things, she was very vain and conceited. The Moon was very vain over her new coat of bright and shining light, and when she found that, if she moved off far into the sky, she would appear very small to the people on the earth, she said to herself:

"I AM so very beautiful that it would be a shame to move so far away that I would appear like a little candle in the sky. I am going to stay down close to the earth, where people can admire me every single night and consider me the most beautiful of all stars. What is the sense of my having all this shining light if not to have people admire me? Move away out yonder? Indeed, I'll not!"

"And, with that, she went twinkling about in the sky, turning 'round and 'round like a vain girl, so that people could see and admire her every night of the world.

When the other stars saw what the moon was doing they were very much disgusted with her.

"That vain little piece!" they twinkled one to another. "She ought to have the conceit taken out of her!"

Then Arcturus, a smart old star, got behind a cloud, where he wouldn't be disturbed, and thought a long time for it was a rainy spell and he could stay quietly hidden for quite a time, and when he came forth he twinkled to the other stars something about like this:

"Oh! my friends, we will teach that vain little moon a lesson thus. You remember when night was made, there was a lot of darkness left over. I have found that it is all lying now down in the bottom of the Great Dipper. Can we not arrange to paint over that moon with some of it?"

"Indeed, we can," twinkled the stars in the Great Bear. "And I will use my tail for a brush."

"No," twinkled the other stars, "that would be too severe a punishment to turn all her vain little light into darkness. Let us agree upon some milder plan."

"VERY well," twinkled big Jupiter. "I will suggest this. We will have Great Bear splash the darkness over her face every month. It will take the poor thing a month to wash it off, and then, when she gets it off, the Great Bear will splash it over with darkness again."

"Good, good," twinkled all the stars. And that is why, every month, you see the moon gradually growing darker; it is the Great Bear splashing with his tail over the face of the Moon the darkness that was left in the bottom of the Great Dipper. And then, when you see the Moon gradually growing brighter again, it is the Moon herself slowly washing the darkness off.

And have you ever noticed the scowl on the face of the Man in the Moon? That is because he hates to have the

Bringing the Life-Tone from Your Records

The great audience is hushed. Low, sweet, the singer's voice floats out, gently as a breath, softly as a dream.

If but—from a phonograph—we could hear the utter tenderness of that singer's tone!

But no record could ever "take" that. And never existed a phonograph that could graduate perfectly the strengthened tones forced upon the singer by record-taking necessities—never "till the Vocalion came."

The Aeolian-Vocalion is so truly wonderful because it rectifies records. It utters every suggestion of that velvet softness a singer would wish to use—not by muffling tone but by controlling it through the Graduola device—just as the human throat does—at its source.

Its wonderful Symphonetic Horn preserves, too, more than mere tonal beauty—it preserves the very character of every voice. The hard metallic phonograph tone has disappeared!

We urge you to try your own records on a wonderful Vocalion here without the slightest obligation to yourself. We greatly wish your friends to hear your opinion of how it has brought out hidden beauties you never knew your records had.

The Aeolian-Vocalion

STOCK MARKET
EXCHANGE RATESSharp Advance Marks the Close
After Sterling Makes Low Record at 4.51.

By leased wire from the New York

Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The Evening

Post, in its copyrighted financial review

today, says:

Sterling exchange, which fell to 4.50

in the usual business hours yesterday and which afterward sold at 4.50 on the street, made another downward plunge

today. Under conditions now prevailing, different quotations will be made by different traders at the same moment, but the rate of 4.51 represents a decline of 1/16 cent from the normal minimum, was the lowest figure

since parity, and the prevalent quotation

during the strain of August and September.

Such rates as prevailed today might without much exaggeration be described as indicating a state of panic in the market for exchange. That is, the situation is that people in need of drafts on London will not buy without

protecting themselves against the loss

on the further downward movement

which they take for granted.

Nature of the fact of itself contributes to the demoralization in the sterling market. It was equally natural that yesterday's talk of England's decline, wherever possible her prospective orders for importations from America, should have been repeated. This,

too, is mostly an incident of a panic

condition, in which the prevalent condition is that people in need of drafts on London will not buy without

protecting themselves against the loss

on the further downward movement

which they take for granted.

Exchange Rates Recover.

Our export trade will presumably go to very, very normal and it is easily possible, in view of the state of mind which has emphasized the weak decline in sterling, that after tomorrow's later recovery in rates will be further.

If expedient of any sort for creating a large New York credit were even to come to the aid of sterling,

a violent rise in exchange could not fall to follow it. But it must at the same time be remembered that the sense of financial foreboding and accumen, shown by the London banking community, was not without cause.

The Jarr Family

By ROY L. MCCARDELL.

"PERMIT me," said Mr. Jarr, stepping in ahead of Mrs. Kittingly, the little blond grass widow who lived in the apartments above. So saying, Mr. Jarr gallantly opened the street door. He gave one apprehensive and agonized glance above as they reached the street, but, not seeing Mrs. Jarr at the window, breathed a sigh of relief.

"Oh!" Mrs. Kittingly emitted a little shriek as she stumbled, and, putting out her hand, held tight to him. "It's nice to have a big, strong man to hold one up!"

The sweet stood on Mr. Jarr's brow, although the day was not so hot. Gus, the saloon keeper, was looking over the screen in his cafe window. He caught Mr. Jarr's eye and winked a stolid German wink.

"I'm going downtown to see my lawyer. My check should have been in the mail this morning," said Mrs. Kittingly. "It's my alimony, Mr. Jarr, for you know my sad story. Suppose that the fiend should have determined not to send it!"

Mr. Jarr murmured weakly that such a thing couldn't be. Just then they passed Bepier, the butcher's. Bepier was standing in the door talking to Slavinsky, the glasser. A broad grin was on their faces and Slavinsky gave Bepier a nudge.

As they descended the stairs to the subway station Mr. Jarr felt a sense of impending doom. But he dropped two tickets in the box and escorted the lady into the car. Mrs. Stryver, who was waiting on the platform, hurried in behind them, giving Mrs. Kittingly a curt nod and Mr. Jarr a still curter one.

Johnson, who worked in the same office with Mr. Jarr, got in a few stations below, and, grinning broadly, pretended not to see Mr. Jarr and his companion.

"Did you see Mrs. Rangle coming out of the grocery store?" asked Mrs. Kittingly. "She looked so peculiarly after us. Are you still good friends with those people?"

"Why, yes, I believe so," stammered Mr. Jarr.

"Well, I wouldn't say a word about anybody, but I think they are common, vulgar people," said Mrs. Kittingly. Mrs. Stryver across the way caught the last words, and, thinking it a personal allusion, stared fixedly at Mr. Jarr as if to say: "So this is the way you carry on! Little does your poor wife know!"

"I'm so glad to have a chance to talk to you," chattered Mrs. Kittingly. "I am all alone in the world and have no one to confide in." Then she poured forth all her troubles into Mr. Jarr's ears. They principally concerned her personal pulchritude, the friendliness of a man who sent her alimony, but wouldn't pay her other bills, and of how censorious the world at large was to young and beautiful women all alone.

"And the women are the worst!" said Mrs. Kittingly. "They are a lot of cats, that's what they are—cats!"

Mr. Jarr muttered that some of them were pretty bad that way, but he hardly knew what he was saying.

Mrs. Kittingly. "They are a lot of cats, that's what they are—cats!"

Mr. Jarr muttered that some of them were pretty bad that way, but he hardly knew what he was saying.

"It's the woman that pays!" cried Mrs. Kittingly. She had heard this in a play and it stuck to her. "It's the woman that pays! So I always feel glad when I read in the paper that some rich wretch loses heavy damages in a breach of promise suit. And think of that creature I threw away my life on! I might have had a career but for him, and he positively refuses to meet any of my expenses over and above the pittance the court compels him to send me. Ah! It's the woman who pays!"

Mr. Jarr was going to say "not always," but thought better of it.

"Here is my station," said Mrs. Kittingly, after a pause, "but I'm going to ride downtown with you. It's so sweet to have somebody who is kind and sympathetic to talk to."

Mrs. Stryver arose and passed them. "How is your wife? How are your children?" she asked pointedly of Mr. Jarr, and the whole car tittered.

It used to be that Mr. Jarr was afraid to come home in the dark, but that he was afraid to come home at a

THE REMAINDER OF THIS STOCK AT STILL LOWER PRICES—FINAL REDUCTIONS

Brandt's Big Shoe Sale

Important—Read Every Word

Brandt's had one of the largest Shoe stocks in the West. They kept their stock clean and up-to-date. Their prices were reasonable. If you paid Brandt's regular prices in this sale, you would get honest values.

During the five weeks of this sale we have sold about three-fourths of Brandt's stock. The remaining one-fourth must be sold at once. We must make room for the carpenters and decorators. Our store must be remodeled prior to our great Fall Opening.

This store is closed all day today, to enable us to rearrange stocks and mark all shoes still lower. All costs and profits have been disregarded. All shoes show Brandt's regular prices and the final reduction, which is so low that this store will be crowded as never before.

Sale Opens Thursday
